> An Elegant Article on the Planets in August.

[Providence Journal.] Jupiter still remains lord of the ascendant, the bright and peerless evening star. rising now before sunset and being the most conspicuous object among the starry throng throughout the month. No observer who casts his eyes upward to the southeastern sky in the early evening can fail to recognize this regal planet, for he reigns alone, no bright star coming near his path. All through the night he beams with starry light, dipping his radiant disc below the western horizon shortly before the sun appears rejoicing in the east. His track can be easily followed by remembering that be rises four minutes earlier every evening, and that at the end of the month he will rise two hours earlier than at the commencement setting not far from 2 o'clock. The night of the 11th will witness a brilliant picture on his monthly record; he is then in conjunction with the moon the day before the full, and the nearly rounded orb and beaming star will form a scene which, though off-repeated on the celestial background, never ceases to delight the eye of the appreciative star-gazer. His lustre is slowly fading, for he passed his period of greatest brilliancy at his opposition on the 25th of July, and this giant member of the solar brotherhood is now speeding on his course farther and farther away from the terrestrial

Mars is still classed with the evening stars, but is too near the sun to be visible during the month, and will be of little consequence in the planetary world for some months to come, reaching his conjunction with the sun on the 18th of September. He is near Uranus on the 7th. Saturn, though counted as a morning star until his opposition on the 22d of September, is fast becoming an object of evey after 10 o'clock. First came a little tremulous glimmering among the evergreen shrubs on the hill-summit, and then came the planet scintillating gently and quickly subsiding into the pale, dingy color and severe dignity marking the personality of the plant Saturn. There was a superb array of starry glory in the region around. Meteors were falling in all directions, amid the solemn stillness of the night, the northern constellations were glittering like gems of many hues, and in the clear atmosphere the stars lit up the sky with a wonderful light, as if they were shining on another sphere to which Jupiter and Saturn played the part of young moons. Saturn rises now about half-past nine, and at the end of the month will rise about half-past seven. He can easily be recognized, rising farther north than Jupiter, and, like his brotherplanet, baying no stars of note in his immediate vicinity. Venus still remains the radiant star of the morning, and comes gently tripping above the eastern hills before the morning light is breaking. She is travelling far away from us, and approaching her superior conjunction with the sun on the 5th of December; after which we may hope for her peerless light to illumine the long winter evenings. If such a scene as is presented every morning to the eye that now anticipates the dawn were a rare celestial phenomenon, astronomers would travel balf over the world to see the sight and then feel that the half had not been told them; for what more beautiful and glowing picture is recorded on astronomical annals than that of the fairest of the stars heralding the breaking of the day, while the first rosy tints of the coming sunrise gleam on the horizon's verge in the serenc summer mornround the sun he reaches his greatest eastern elongation on the 13th, but his comings and goings are invisible to terrestrial observers, excepting those with bright or practiced eyes, who may then have the good fortune to catch a glimpse of the star that loves best to hide his beams within the eclipsing range of the all-powerful sun. The moon plays a prominent part on the August records. Crowned at the commencement of her course with the honor of giving a portion of the world a sight of that grand phenomenon, a total solar eclipse, she modestly goes on her way, waxing from the tiny silver crescent gracing the first evenings of the month to her conjunction with Jupiter on the 11th. On the next evening, at her full, she treats the world to another scene, for she rises partially eclipsed, and remains shorn of a portion of her fullorbed beauty till nearly 9 o'clock. Thus we have a solar and a lunar eclipse within a fortnight of each other. The waning moon is also in conjunction with the three planets, Mars, Uranus, and Mercury, a day

The August meteors must not be forgotten among events of celestial interest. The earth ploughs her way through the August meteor-zone on the 10th, and on that night, and those before and after, myriads of meteors will descend through the atmosphere in fiery tears. The constellation Perseus, in the northeast, is the radiant point for these meteors, and this is the most favorable part of the heavens for keeping watch, though the anomalous cosmical atoms are prome to mark their shining way in every quarter of the sky.

THE GOOCHLAND ROBBERY-DEATH OF MRS. DRINARD.-Mrs. Drinard. mother-in-law of Mr. Henley, died at 3 o'clock Satur-IS LARGER THAN THE COMBINED CIRCU-day afternoon of the wound inflicted by the LATION OF ALL THE OTHER DAILY NEWS-negro robbers who attacked Mr. Henley's store and residence on Thursday night. She was about fifty years of age, and resided near Mannikintown. She was on a visit to her daughter at the time of the occurrence which resulted in her death.

Mr. Henley is getting better, and though his wound is a severe one, he will probably

The people of the neighborhood are still greatly excited about the robbery and mur-der, and if they catch the perpetrators in the next day or two, or before their indig-nation has cooled, they will in all probability make short work of the rascals. Detective John Wren on Saturday afternoon arrested a negro named William Burwell, who is suspected to be one of the murderous robbers. Burwell has served two or three terms in the chain-gang, and is a notoriously bad character; but he has heretofore confined his operations to the sneak-thief business, and is by many believed to be incapable of the audacity displayed by either of the two men at Henley's store. There is as yet no evidence to connect him with the affair. He declares that he knows nothing about it, and says that he can prove that he was in Richmond Thursday. The men he relles upon to prove an alibi for him are not of good reputation. His associations, however, are with thieves exclusively. The man supposed to have been Burwell's associate in this undertaking is Bradford Robertson, a mulatto, who answers closely to the description given of the man who shot Mr. Henley. He avoided the police authorities Saturday and Saturday night, but cannot long escape them, and therefore had as well come in and surrender himself. Policeman Fox Saturday evening arrested Tom Reed and James Prosser (negroes), from Goochland county, whose movements were regarded as suspicious. They do not answer the description given by Mr. Hen-

It is also stated that a man has been arrested in Goochland "who can give material information" concerning the robbers. A reward of one hundred dollars has been offered for the conviction of the two negroes. The county authorities ought to rouse them and see that these miscreants do not escape. They have not as yet displayed any very remarkable activity in the prem-

It was arranged that Mrs. Drinard should be buried at 4 P. M. Sunday. It was expected that the funeral would be attended by an immense concourse of people.
